POST READING

Possible answers:

1. Yes, it's important for schools to offer classes in multiple languages because it helps students become more culturally aware and enhances their communication skills, which can be valuable in a globalized world.
2. Communities can encourage language preservation by organizing cultural events, offering language classes, and creating opportunities for native speakers to share their knowledge. Embracing both the native and dominant languages can lead to a richer cultural experience.

TEXT 2 A Controversial Pioneer in Sign Language Communication

PRE READING

Possible answers:

1. I've heard about some animals like primates using sign language, but I'm not familiar with many examples.
2. I think some animals might use sign language because it allows them to communicate silently, which can be advantageous in certain situations like hunting or avoiding predators.

DISCUSSION

Possible answers:

1. I was fascinated by how chimpanzees can use signs like 'eat' or 'water' to express their basic needs and desires.
2. Animals using sign language are similar to humans in the way they point or use gestures to indicate something, just like when a dog signals 'play' by wagging its tail.
