

SAMPLE PROBLEM SOLUTION ESSAY

Topic: High tuition fees are a big problem for some students and families. Describe the problem and suggest some solutions.

Making Education ssSsssssssAffordablesSSSS

Education is a fundamental right for every person, but the issue of high tuition fees has become a concerning issue in recent years. As college costs rise, it's important to understand how this affects people and find ways to solve the problem. This essay looks at the problem of tuition fees and suggests ways to make education more affordable.

When tuition fees go up, it's harder for some students to go to college. This means that some really smart students from families with less money might not be able to go to college at all. This isn't fair because everyone should have a chance at a good education, no matter where they come from. Also, after finishing school, students often have big debts from loans. These debts can stop them from doing things like buying a house or following their dreams for a job.

To fix this problem, we can do a few things. First, the government can give more money to colleges, so they don't need to raise fees so much. This would help students and families. Second, we can offer scholarships or grants to students who don't have much money. This free money can make it easier for them to go to college and not worry about loans. Colleges can also look for other ways to get money, like teaming up with businesses or getting donations. This would help them have a steady income without putting all the pressure on students.

In a nutshell, high tuition fees are causing problems for students and colleges, and we need to solve the problem of high tuition fees. By getting the government to support education more, providing scholarships, and finding creative ways for colleges to make money, we can make education affordable for everyone. Education is important for everyone's future, so we need to work together to make sure it's affordable and fair for all.

SAMPLE CAUSE ESSAY

Topic: Causes of popularity of home offices

Why Home offices?

In the past twenty years, technological advances and social changes have profoundly affected almost all aspects of life. People do not learn, work or entertain in the same way as they used to. One of the latest trends in business life is working in home offices. More and more people – especially those living in big cities - have become interested in working in home offices recently. Even though there are many reasons for the popularity of home offices, the most common two are a more comfortable working environment and no transportation problem.

Having a more comfortable working environment can be the first reason why people want to have a home office. It is a well-known fact that companies do not always give a person a comfortable working environment. For instance, there may be too many people around in a company. However, at home, people can peacefully work without being disturbed. Another point is that one wants to wear different clothes every day when s/he works in a company. Nonetheless, a person who works in a home office usually works alone, and s/he can wear whatever s/he wants. In short, because of a more comfortable working environment many people want to work in a home office.

The second reason why many people want to work in a home office is that there is no transportation related problem. Transportation causes many problems for working people. For instance, in big cities there is almost always traffic jam. Thousands of people leave their houses in the morning to go to work. Because of traffic jam, they suffer from a great deal of stress even before work. However, if they work at home, they won't have such a problem. To give another example, in big cities transportation is a problem in terms of money. People have to pay a great amount of money for transportation vehicles such as buses. However, when a person works in a home office, s/he doesn't have to leave her/his house, so s/he does not have to pay any money. In brief, transportation is the second reason for the popularity of working in a home office.

All in all, more and more people want to work in a home office because of several reasons, two of which are a more comfortable working environment and transportation problem. It seems that there will be more people who want to work in a home office as long as conditions in cities remain difficult.

SAMPLE EFFECT ESSAY

Topic: Effects of Sleep Problems Among Teenagers

Is Sleep so Important?

Sleep is an essential component of a healthy lifestyle. However, studies show that a growing number of teenagers are experiencing sleeping problems which can have profound impacts on their lives, affecting both their daily routines and academic performance. This essay will explore the main effects of sleep problems on teenagers.

One of the major effects of sleeping problem among teenagers is disorderly life. First of all, not having enough sleep or oversleeping leads to tiredness and laziness. According to a study conducted in Switzerland, one who sleeps less than 5 hours or more than 8 hours is prone to spending their days far less effectively than the ones who have regular sleep a day. Secondly, having problems with sleep may lead to chronic insomnia. To illustrate, an insomniac person cannot get sleep for 3 days in a row so he might cause variety of accidents ranging from traffic accidents to domestic ones.

The second most important effect is failure at school. As a starting point, a teenager who has sleep problems finds it hard to be on time for school since may have difficulty in waking up or he may not find himself strong enough to go to school. Not going to school regularly may result in lagging behind the curriculum. Moreover, scientists state that at least 7 hours of sleep is needed to maintain one's attention span. The young people having sleep problems cannot pay attention for a long time and this can cause failure at school.

As it can be understood from arguments mentioned above, sleep problems have many destructive effects on young people such as having irregular lifestyle and being unsuccessful at school. I believe that young people need to find out the reasons for their sleeping problems and try to solve them if they don't want to experience these effects.
